Tips for Effective Résumé

Your résumé is often the first contact with a prospective employer. It should present the best possible picture of your skills, abilities, and interests. The purpose of a résumé is to convince an employer to select you for an interview. Your ability to communicate in a clear, concise way is one of the most important aspects of your job search. Since most employers spend less than a minute scanning a résumé, it is important to be succinct and to emphasize your skills and accomplishments.

- BE CONCISE Employers do not need to know your life story. Therefore, choose your words carefully and present your most relevant experiences and accomplishments clearly. One page is recommended for most entry-level positions. Candidates with more than a few years of full-time professional experience may have a two-page résumé.
- BE HONEST The most crucial element in any job search is trust. Don't sell yourself short but never include anything in your résumé that you cannot back up during an interview.
- BE NEAT AND AVOID TEMPLATES Start from a blank Word document with one-inch margins and enter your information using bolding, capitalization, and underlining to emphasize titles and headings. Templates are difficult to edit and do not always upload properly into an online application system.
- BE WELL ORGANIZED It is important that you organize your sections and information carefully so that it is easy to read and best demonstrates your strong points at a glance.
- BE PROFESSIONAL Cultivate a polished look. If you e-mail your résumé, send it as a PDF so the formatting is preserved. If submitting a printed copy of your résumé, use résumé paper (standard size, white, pale gray, or cream) for your résumé. Printed résumés should not be folded or stapled. Utilize a 10x13 envelope for mailing and paperclip your documents together.
- BE CAREFUL & PROOFREAD Review your work. Does your résumé say what you want it to say? Does it look professional? Is it completely free of spelling errors, and are you using correct grammar and punctuation? Is your font size and style consistent throughout the entire document?
- EMPHASIZE ACCOMPLISHMENTS AND RESULTS Accomplishments are more meaningful than just a list of job responsibilities. Use action verbs to make your accomplishments come alive. Talk about the results you achieved in your various work or organization experiences. Highlight your transferable skills. Quantify your results when possible – use numbers, %s and $s when appropriate to demonstrate success.
- DO NOT INCLUDE PERSONAL OR HIGH SCHOOL INFORMATION Your age/photo/Social Security Number/marital status/wages should not be listed on your résumé. Exceptions do apply for certain majors such as Theater and Dance, as well as those applying for jobs in the federal government. High school information is not necessary once you've finished your freshman year in college unless it is directly relevant to the position.
- TAILOR AND REVISE Your résumé should be tailored to the position for which you are applying. Larger companies will do a key word search of your résumé to match their job description. Make sure your contact information is current with a phone number and e-mail address where an employer can reach you during business hours. Be sure to have your résumé reviewed by Career Center staff and to upload it to Handshake. (See final page of guide for instructions to upload.)

Tips for Effective Cover Letters

An important but often misunderstood part of the job search process is the cover letter. Your résumé tells employers about your qualifications, education, and experiences, but it is your cover letter that piques their interest enough to read your résumé. Your cover letter lets you emphasize information you want the reader to notice in your résumé. It also gives you the opportunity to personalize and tailor your message and to highlight your written communication skills.

- SELL YOURSELF Get the reader interested in you and your experiences.
- BE ASSERTIVE If the purpose of sending your cover letter is to get an application or arrange an interview, say so. Many candidates write sentence after sentence without getting to the point in their cover letters. When closing, mention what you will do to follow up with the employer and when. Then do not forget to call.
- MEET THE EMPLOYER'S NEEDS Many companies will do key word searches of your cover letter and résumé to filter the candidates that most closely match their job description. Speak to the requirements of the job and use the correct industry language and buzzwords. Also tell the employer not just how you will do the duties of the job, but how you will add value to the organization. Provide at least one concise example of how you have applied an important skill in a previous position or school project.
- MAKE IT PERFECT Spell correctly and watch your grammar. Have multiple people proof your résumé. The ISU Career Center has Walk-In hours every day for quick 15-minute appointments to have your document reviewed. Save a copy of your document as a PDF to ensure un-altered formatting.
- MATCH YOUR RÉSUMÉ Make sure to use the same paper, color, and font style as your résumé.
- PROPERLY ADDRESS YOUR COVER LETTER Find out the name and title of the person to whom you should send your cover letter. If you cannot get this information online, you may have to call the employer to find out. Make sure to spell their name correctly and do not confuse their job title. Beginning your cover letter with “to whom it may concern” or “dear sir or madam” is not recommended. If you are unable to identify the proper contact, use “Dear Hiring Official” in your greeting. If you are sending your résumé via e-mail, in many cases the e-mail message becomes your cover letter.
- GET TO THE POINT Brevity is key. Employers do not have time to read long cover letters. Keep it to one page. In the first sentence of your cover letter, explain what the letter is about and why you are writing it. Be concise and make your letter easy to read.
- DO NOT OVERUSE THE WORD / After completing the first draft of your cover letter, take a pencil and circle every sentence that begins with /. Vary sentence structure and use compound sentences to reduce the number of sentences that begin with /. Read the cover letter out loud to yourself to ensure it flows well and sounds professional.
- CONVEY THE RIGHT IMAGE Never be negative or speak poorly about a previous employer. Make sure your language conveys a confident tone. Instead of saying "I feel" and "I think", try saying "I know". It leaves the reader with a much more positive impression.
- CUSTOMIZE Every cover letter should be tailored to each company, industry, and position. Research the company ahead of time and use industry language so they know how interested you are in their company.

Dr. Alice Burns, Human Resources Director
Cedars-Sinai Medical Center
8700 Beverly Blvd #2900A
Los Angeles, CA 90048

Dear Dr. Burns,

I would like to apply for the R.N. position at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center that I found posted on the Indiana State University website. I have had a variety of related experiences so I will be prepared to assist in your rapidly expanding Intensive Care Unit.

In 2022, I received my BSN degree in Nursing from Indiana State University. While volunteering as an orderly at Terre Haute Regional Medical Center for 10 hours a week, I learned patience and perseverance. I also volunteered for 150 hours with the Rural Health Innovation Collaborative and grew to understand the challenges faced by individuals living in traditionally underserved rural areas. During my work with the RHIC, I learned the importance of careful assessment and how to creatively serve the needs of low income populations.

Outside of the classroom, I served on the executive board of the Student Nurses Association as Secretary, Vice President, and President. In 2021, I was inducted into the Lambda Sigma Chapter of Sigma Theta Tau International Honor Society and have managed to remain on the Dean's list during all eight semesters of my nursing program. My commitment to nursing is as strong as it was when I got my first "nursing kit". I appreciate the opportunity to make a real difference in patients' daily lives and I find the profession endlessly interesting and rewarding.

I would welcome the opportunity to meet with you to discuss my qualifications further. Please feel free to contact me at 317-123-4567 or gmartin1234@sycamores.indstate.edu. Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Gabriel Martin

Enclosure: Résumé, References

Tips for Creating a Reference Sheet

How and where to list references:

- DO NOT STATE “References available upon request” on your résumé. It is often a waste of valuable space because employers assume you can supply references.
- References are not listed on your résumé; they are on a separate document.
- When setting up your reference page, be sure to use the same heading as you did on your résumé.
- Skip a few lines after your heading and write the word References. Below that is where you will list your contacts.
- The average number of references is 3-5.
- Include references name, title, organization, mailing address, phone number and e-mail.

When to give your reference list to a prospective employer:

- Provide reference information when you are asked to. If you have reached the interview stage and have not been asked for reference information, you may consider offering it.
- Do not send reference information with your résumé unless it has been requested.
- For most undergraduates, employers will not be contacting references prior to interviewing you.

How to select references:

- Ask people who have a positive opinion of you and who can describe your work-related qualities and personal characteristics.
- Past and present employers usually know about your reliability, initiative, and ability to work with others. This information is valuable, even if your employment was/is not career-related.
- Faculty members know about your academic ability, productivity, timeliness, and perhaps have observed how you work with others.
- Advisors and coaches may be aware of information about you that could be relevant to a potential employer, such as maturity, initiative, interpersonal skills, or leadership qualities.

Getting permission:

- Never give someone’s name as a reference without securing that person’s permission in advance.
- Specifically ask if they will serve as a positive reference.
- Verify spelling of names, titles, and all contact information for your references.
- Give each person who agrees to serve as a reference a copy of your résumé. This lets your references know about abilities, interests, and experiences they may not have observed.
- Keep your references informed about activities and progress in your job/internship search. Tell your references the names of persons and organizations to which you have given their names.
- When possible, give them a copy of the job description for the positions for which you are applying. This helps your references be prepared for phone calls and e-mails they may receive.
- Thank each reference in writing for his or her assistance.

Interview Preparation at a Glance

First Impressions are Everything!

It is critical to remember that first impressions matter in the interview process. The interview is not just a chance for an employer to learn more about the applicant's personal and professional attributes and whether they will be a fit for the position and organization. It is also the applicant's chance to better understand the position and if the goals of the company match his or her career goals, objective, and skill set. This is also a great chance to get an inside view of the company and their working environment.

Types of Interviews

Phone Interview

- This is a common first interview. Employers use this opportunity to screen the applicant. They ask detailed questions to determine if the candidate possesses the required skills to perform the job and to expand upon some content of the applicant's résumé. Phone interviews traditionally last about a half hour.

Employment interview

- Focus of this face-to-face meeting is to determine whether the applicant's qualifications match the employer's needs and vice-versa.

Clinical Demonstration

- Focus of this interview is on practical application of nursing skills and to observe direct interaction with patients and other staff. This is usually part of the face-to-face interview process for healthcare professionals.

Panel Interview

- Common for graduate/professional school interviews but also used in the professional sector. An advantage of this type of interview is you get to meet more than one person at one time. Make sure to make eye contact with everyone in the room. It is tempting to focus on just one person.

Group Interview

- This allows multiple interviewees to meet with one employer. It may sound easier because there is more than one applicant involved. However, the applicants are doing the majority, if not all, of the work. The employer typically instructs the applicants to interact or go around and answer questions. It is important to remain true to your own qualifications and not try to compete with others answers.

How to Prepare for an Interview

Prepare Yourself

- Interviews can be a very intimidating task, if you are unprepared.
- Preparation and practice are key ingredients to a successful interview. Identify potential questions and practice responding to those questions multiple times.
- You must be able to talk about yourself and your previous work experience with confidence and enthusiasm. Never speak negatively about yourself or a past employer. It can be a small world, especially within an industry.

Know the Employer

- How long has the employer been in operation?
- Where is the organization's main office?

- How many other locations do they have?
- Is it a public or private organization?
- Has the organization been in the news lately? For what reason(s)?
- What are the services/products/programs this organization provides?
- Who are its competitors?
- How is it doing relative to its competitors?
- What are the organization's short- and long-term goals? Mission? Values?
- What else is the organization known for such as community involvement, special programs, or great working atmosphere?
- What challenges or difficulties does the organization face?
- How can I help solve these challenges in my future role?
- What is the mission and vision of the company?
- Do they have a presence on social media?

Questions for the Interviewer

- What are some of the qualifications you expect the ideal candidate for this position to have?
- What characteristics do individuals who are successful in this position possess?
- Is there support staff on the unit to assist nurses?
- What is the nurse-to-patient ratio?
- Could you describe the normal daily routine for this position?
- In what ways are nurses held accountable for high qualities of practice?
- How would you describe the culture of this unit/hospital?
- What do you love about working here?
- How much input do nurses have regarding systems, equipment and the care environment?
- What professional development opportunities are available to nurses?
- How will my performance be evaluated? How often? By whom?
- How/Why did this position become available? Is it a new position?
- What are the next steps in the hiring process?

Behavior Based Interviewing

Behavior based interviewing is a common style of interviewing that most companies use in their hiring process. The basic premise behind behavioral interviewing is past situations predict future performance. These types of questions are more probing and boil down to three main areas:

Can you do the job? Will you love the job? Can we work with you?

C-A-R Strategy for Answering Questions

CIRCUMSTANCE

- Describe a specific you were directly involved in and recount it as it occurred. What and who was involved? Tell the interviewer about a particular situation that relates to the question. Use examples from past internships, work experience, classes, team involvement, and community service.

ACTION

- What needed to be done? What did you do to solve the situation? Always emphasize your strengths and your specific actions. Have success stories prepared ahead of time that represent your skills, qualities, and characteristics.

RESULT

- What happened as a result of your behavior? What did you learn from the situation?

Common Nursing Interview Questions

- What made you choose nursing as a career?
- How has your training prepared you for a nursing career?
- What interests you about working here?
- Describe a challenging problem you faced on one of your clinical rotations. How did you solve it?
- What do you do to keep current with medical findings and practices?
- Describe how you handled stress in a past job or clinical setting.
- How would you deal with a doctor who was rude?
- Describe a situation where you had to deal with a difficult or demanding patient.
- How would you handle a family who is displeased with your patient's care?
- What have you identified as your strongest clinical skill and what challenges you the most?
- What do you feel you contribute to your patients?
- What do you find difficult about being a nurse?
- What do you find most rewarding about being a nurse?
- What are the most important skills a nurse should have?
- How would you describe your organization skills?
- Tell me about a situation where you demonstrated good communication skills.
- Tell me about a time when you had too many things to do and you were required to prioritize your tasks. How did you prioritize and manage your time?

You should also practice answering the tough nursing interview questions ahead of time.

- If you are a recent nursing graduate, you should be prepared to explain to your interviewer what qualities you possess that will help you get up to speed quickly with the demands of your new unit.
- You should be prepared to answer questions regarding any negative experiences you've had in the work place, what you learned from them, and how you would use those experiences in a positive way in your new position.

Illegal Interview Questions

What to do?

It can be uncomfortable when asked an inappropriate question during an interview. It is important to assess what kind of information an employer is seeking in asking these questions. For example, if an employer asks if you are planning on having children, they may be interested in whether or not you will be able to travel or have flexibility in the job. You can address this issue without having to answer the question. For instance, a possible reply could be "If you are worried about whether or not I will be available for business trips, the answer is yes, I will be able to travel." It gives the employer the necessary information and also directs the line of questioning away from the initial question.

Examples

- What is your birthdate?
- Are you or other family member's naturalized citizens?
- Where were you and your parents born?
- What is your religious affiliation or denomination?
- Who do you live with?
- What is your marital status?
- What is your race?

Practice Interview Evaluation

- Appearance: Dress appropriately for the interview. Treat it as if it was the real thing and bring a copy of your résumé.
- Preparation: Prepare questions for your interviewer and research the position and/or company for which you are interviewing. If applying to graduate school, it is important to have knowledge on the particular program, faculty, research, and be able to articulate why that program is the best fit to further your education in that field.
- Greeting/Introduction: Stand to greet your interviewer with a handshake, using their name. Also, make eye contact with the interviewer, smile, and be professional.
- Attitude: Your attitude toward work and working with others is crucial in the hiring process. Convey an attitude that is enthusiastic, sincere, and genuine.
- Responses to Interview Questions: Do your research and practice, practice, practice! Have examples of demonstrated accomplishments and know your goals.
- Oral Communication: Speak clearly and concisely. Think out your response before answering a question. If you need a moment, simply ask the interviewer if it is ok to have a moment to think about the question.
- Body Language: During the interview, be aware of your eye contact, subtle use of hands while speaking, good posture, etc.

Final Advice

- Practice multiple times before your interviews.
- Answer questions honestly, thoroughly and sincerely. If you don't know the answer, ask if you may return to it at the conclusion of the interview.
- Be polite, tactful and sincere. Eye contact is also very important.
- Dress neatly and in interview attire. Conservative is always better.
- Drive to the location before the interview to see how traffic is and where to park.
- Remember that your interview begins the moment you leave the house. You never know who you will meet on your way into the building.
- Have a padfolio to take notes, have extra copies of your résumé on hand, and a reference sheet.
- A padfolio is also a great place to have prepared questions for the interviewer stored.
- Send written thank you letters out immediately following your interview and make sure they are addressed properly. A sample thank you letter is on the final page of this document.
- An email thank you letter is acceptable if the company has indicated they are going to make their decision quickly, but an employer will never complain about getting a written thank you.

Dear Mrs. Taylor:

I enjoyed interviewing with you during your recruiting visit to Indiana State University on April 4. The critical care nursing position within your Intensive Care Unit sounds both challenging and rewarding, and I look forward to your decision concerning an on-site interview.

As I mentioned during the interview, I will be graduating in May with a Bachelor's degree in Nursing. I have gained many skills, as well as an understanding of assessment, treatment of acutely ill patients, high-intensity therapies, and working closely with patients and their families. My clinical experiences have prepared me well to enter your unit and be a contributing member of your ICU team.

I have enclosed a copy of my college transcript and a list of references that you requested. I am very enthusiastic about becoming part of a great team that makes a difference in so many lives. I can be reached at 812-123-5432 or jfletcher999@sycamores.indstate.edu. Thank you again for the interview.

Sincerely,

Jessica Fletcher
