Recruiting, training, and retaining healthcare professionals in underserved communities

Find Them

WCI-AHEC works to recruit young people into health professions training programs by:

- Engaging them in health-related programming such as camps, field trips, and classroom presentations that introduce them to various health professions.
- Supporting projects that enhance skills vital to succeeding in the health care workforce, such as science, technology, engineering, and mathematics (STEM).
- Introducing them to the benefits of health careers, including the rewards of serving rural and underserved populations.

Train Them

WCI-AHEC is committed to helping prepare students in health professions programs to work in primary care and serve in communities that are classified as rural and/or medically underserved. This is done by:

- Identifying and coordinating clinical placements in these communities.
- Offering hands-on opportunities, alongside a variety of other health care disciplines.
- Supporting educational and training opportunities that enhance their competencies and further their intent to serve these communities.

Keep Them

WCI-AHEC supports health care providers serving in health disparity populations by:

- Offering continuing education programs to help providers further their knowledge and maintain professional licensure.
- Providing tools that support practice improvement and enhance patient care.
