Welcome Speech

Dr. Brad Balch

Dean of Bayh College of Education, Indiana State University

It is with pleasure that I bring greetings on behalf of the faculty, staff, and students in the Bayh College of Education at Indiana State University. It is our privilege to host and help sponsor the 2024 International Symposium of Korean Education System and Culture. This exceptional event would not be possible without the support and sponsorship of many centers at Indiana State University as well as the Terre Haute community. Many thanks to all!

The College is most grateful for the leadership and expert facilitation of Dr. Yong Joon Park and his many colleagues who have worked tirelessly to ensure today's event is second to none. Today's event, no doubt, makes an important and value-added contribution to our East Asian engagement efforts and we are so pleased you are here.

One need only peruse the program information to realize the exceptional talent and rich academic activities being shared. The impact and value-added benefits to participation is undeniable and we are grateful for your participation. Do take care and I wish you the very best. 감사합니다.

Appreciation and Recognition of Korean War Veterans

I, Yong Joon Park, deeply appreciate the U.S., the Republic of Korea, and other allies' veterans who fought for the democracy during the Korean War (1950-1953). Many Koreans and Korean Americans including me will remember their sacrifice forever.

Special Thanks to Korean War Veterans in the U.S.:

"The United States and the Republic of Korea (or South Korea) are allies with a long history of shared sacrifice. In a call to defend freedom and democracy abroad, 1.8 million Americans joined the fight. The Republic of Korea has grown into a thriving, vibrant country, and the enduring relationship between our two nations has flourished through decades of peace."
